INTRODUCTION of AJOU GSIS

The Graduate School of International Studies at Ajou University was established in 1996 as a pioneer of professional studies programs in Korea. The founding motivation of Ajou GSIS was to meet the growing global demand of international academic institute.

At present, Ajou GSIS has over 1,000 alumni students in more than 72 countries worldwide, who play important roles at their respective positions in government agencies and global enterprises. It is Ajou GSIS's main role to educate the future leaders professionally and academically for this increasingly complex global society. Also encouraging students to explore the very best out of their time and giving opportunity to discover their talents as a global leader are Ajou GSIS's main focus.

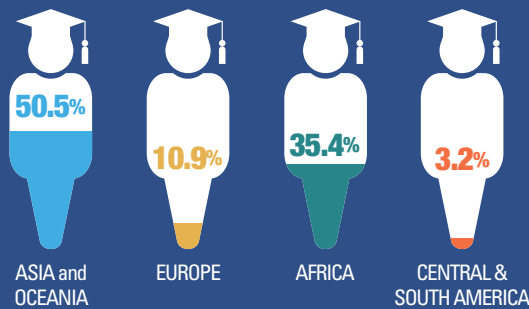

Ajou GSIS has most diverse community with 30 different backgrounds and this diverse background will give you a chance to develop your communication, technology, decision making, and teamwork skills as you prepare for a career in international fields.

Ajou GSIS currently offers five different majors with the courses that are applicable in the real international fields; International Business, International Trade, International Development and Cooperation, NGO Studies, and Energy Studies. Also since 2004, Ajou GSIS has been funded by the KOICA (Korea International Cooperation Agency) to educate government officials from developing countries in international business, international trade, and energy studies, and has produced around 249 graduates until today.
